

ABSTRACT

The invention is a protective liner for the floor or cargo space of a motor vehicle. The protective liner is constructed of a flexible fabric, impervious to moisture and contaminants, which is provided with a flexible and coilable steel frame about its perimeter. The steel frame urges the cargo liner into unfolded and extended position when in use, but permits the liner to be collapsed into a compact package for storage and transport.